Pescolanciano is a small village in Alto Molise that developed in the Norman age around the imposing Castello d'Alessandro, among the most beautiful in Molise. Due to the magical and fascinating environment in which it stands, Pescolanciano is considered the "gateway to Alto Molise", an ancient land of still alive traditions linked to agriculture and livestock farming. The area of the village develops along the historic Castel di Sangro → Lucera sheep track which, with the exception of the stretch that crossed the town, has still today retained its suggestive characteristics of a grassy path, ideal for walking or horseback riding. The Pescolanciano area is home to another rarity that is certainly worth a visit. It is the Collemeluccio MAB Reserve with its silver fir woods. Pescolanciano is 120 km from Naples and 200 km from Rome.
