Castelverrino is a small municipality on the right side of the Verrino Valley, located in the valley between the Pietrabbondante moors and the municipalities of Poggio Sannita and Agnone, near the border with Abruzzo. The landscape is hilly, with extensive fields of forage, olive groves, and vineyards.
The sublime beauty of its landscapes and the rich culture and traditions make this small village a great resource. Castelverrino is well connected to the major cities and airports of central and southern Italy: Pescara and Naples are about an hour and a half away, and Rome about two and a half hours.
